Aliath helps women get appointed to the Board of Directors.

In France, the Copé-Zimmermann law paved the way to greater feminization of governance bodies by imposing new regulations on the composition of governing boards.

At Aliath, we look beyond these quota-driven policies: we look at the company's capacity to improve its governance and the women's ability to frontline themselves and contribute to company growth and performance.

Aliath accompanies these women, the present and the future non-executive directors, in their march to greater empowerment and fulfillment.
